LOCATION: In my chair. At my desk

MOOD: 🐼 worky

MUSIC: Garmarna. I think they keep wolves as housepets.

Yes, it is. BeeYOOteeful weather forecast all weekend. Maybe I'll request a change of desk so I can see it out a window.

Better weather here than where I was going to be this weekend, in fact; they've got partly-cloudy forecast. But partly-cloudy is good enough for listening to music.

Meteorology irrelevant to revised weekend plan, however.

I'm whining here because I'm being very, very good everywhere else. No sighing. And there's lots of work to do, which requires my whole brain. So far it's intractable work (*growls*), but we pretty much just started. We will triumph!

Whine a little for me, too, and my lack of hot tub.

You are more full of brave than I am, kemo sabe. Liasing with the IRS frightens even me. *g*

(It did work to nail Capone, tho. Why shouldn't we get some mileage out of it?)

That's why the rest of the world calls it that, sweetie. Do we call it that? Nooooooooooooo.

Your self-control is awesome.

Also, the pizza's here!

Do you think Mom got the white sauce with spinach and garlic because she knew I needed comforting and didn't want to say anything?

Additional comfort found in making fun of the Cowboy rolling his eyes at white sauce on pizza. I think he does it on purpose just to give me material. *g*

Was it the white sauce, or the spinach? Because, you know, he's a little leery of eating anything green.

I think they keep wolves as housepets.

And what's wrong with that I ask? We make excellent pets.

As long as you remember to feed us well.

Have you heard Garmarna? They definitely feed their wolves.

They throw pieces of snotty music reviewers and obstreperous audience members to them. All is happiness in the longhouses of Garmarna.

The obstreperous (had to look that one up, I like!) audience members are fine, but after chewing on a snotty music reviewer, we like a bit of brännvin in our bowl.

And yes, I picked up on Garmarna from your post yesterday. Good stuff.

Well, it doesn't help your blown holiday weekend, but I'll be in Seattle next weekend and doing the Theo tour. What kind of theobroma cacao products do you and your officemates need? (It seems that their distribution is rilly picking up, even back East -- I bet that the Sipping Chocolate is still hard to find on the shelves.)

And as far as new tunes, I trust someone else has told you about the new Wyclef Jean album, Carnival II? Patty Griffin's "lost" Silver Bell album is more rockin' than you'd expect from what she's best known for. How about Ben Kweller? South American Ska -- Los Fabulosos Cadillacs! I've been listening to Man or Astro-Man? and Spiritualized and Mogwai and the Beta Band recently.

That Wyclef Jean is crack, man. I gotta have more Los Fabulosos Cadillacs--I think they're part of my lost tribe. I'm not usually hot for Patty Griffin--intellectually admirable, but she doesn't make me go !!!!!, as a rule-- but I'll check this out. And the others I will pounce on, because you're a good source.

And Theo! The whole office is addicted to Sipping Chocolate with chiles! (The Cowboy looked at me funny when I handed him a cup and told him it was mole you could drink, but even he allowed as how it was a pretty good antidote to D.C. fog.) And bar chocolate with nibs! Actually, I don't think Theo has ever behaved unwisely, so, really, there is no going wrong with those guys.

They've got the other yummy spicy drinking chocolate. Which I also know about through carpe noir. They're, like, down the road from him. Must be tough. *g*

Really not trying to gloat, but it's pretty easy to get spicy maya with steamed milk and espresso around here. And if you get the chance the Winter chocolate mix is quite nice as well, cinnamon, cloves, and stuff like that.

You've now shown you can gloat without really trying. *g*

(Man, nothing like getting up for a post-midnight snack and finding a post about spicy hot chocolate...)
